

University of Detroit Jesuit High School

Address: 8400 Cambridge

Local

State                    v            11/16/81

State Marker

National

University of Detroit High School, 2002

Historic Overview:

The University of Detroit Jesuit was founded in 1877 by the Society of Jesus at the request of the Bishop of the Diocese of Detroit. Originally a high school, the first college-level classes were added in 1879. What was then known as Detroit College became the University of Detroit in 1911. In 1931, the high school moved to its current location at 8400 S. Cambridge, on Detroit's north side. An Academy, serving seventh and eighth grade students, was added in 1973.

Today, U of D Jesuit has a multi-cultural student body drawing from 67 different Metro Detroit area communities. Students come from a wide variety of schools, both public and parochial, urban and suburban.